PREFACE

This is an updated Directory. The purpose is to improve the Department's outreach into the minority communities by providing a compilation of "grass roots" organizations and media for agency use in publicizing USDA programs.

The Directory is divided into two sections: Grass Roots Organizations and Grass Roots Press and Broadcast Media. This Directory lists, alphabetically by state and city, the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of the organizations and media who are able to inform minorities of program availability, changes, and the requirement for nondiscrimination for all USDA programs.

Any directory composed mainly of volunteer organizations is up to date for a short time at best. Most organizations change officers every year and many have their offices in the homes of the presidents. Thus, the best directory is becoming obsolete as the manuscript is being sent to publication.

When an attempt to contact a listed local organization is unsuccessful, or an organization is not listed, try the local chamber of commerce. The chamber supports most local organizations and would have the most recent information on reaching a grass roots level organization.

A brief historical background of some organizations that are dedicated to the advancement of human rights, particularly minorities' rights, is presented here for a better understanding of the use of these organizations. However, there are many organizations listed in this Directory which are not summarized in the historical background section, but they have as much of an impact on the advancement of minorities' rights as do those which are summarized.

On February 12, 1909, 60 socialists and social workers in New York City formed the first bi-racial organization to be an aggressive watchdog of Negroes' liberties. That date marked the founding of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). Two years later, the first branch was organized, and since then over 100 branches have been organized. From 1909 to 1975, this organization has victoriously watched out for the liberties of Negroes through the legal processes. The NAACP has won at least 15 cases in which the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the rights and liberties of Negroes.

The League of Women Voters came into being in 1920, the year woman suffrage was written into the Constitution. It grew out of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which spearheaded the 72-year drive to get women the vote. As its first task the League took on teaching the 20 million newly enfranchised women how to carry out their new responsibilities. League emphasis then, as now, focused on the importance of individuals working together to achieve good government responsive to the needs of all persons. While accomplishing this goal, the League played an important role in the passage of the following historic legislation:

- Social Security Act (1935)
- Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act (1938)
- Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty (1969)
- Office of Economic Opportunity (1965-1974)
- District of Columbia Home Rule (1973)

Presently, there are Leagues in all 50 States and U.S. Territories.

In 1944, ten years after passage of the Indian Reorganization Act (IRA) which established Indian tribes as political entities, the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) was established. Because the tribes' only avenue to Congress was through the Department of Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) which did not always act as advocates of Indian desires, the NCAI was created. Over the years, NCAI has attempted to weld the diverse views of the many into one position and has presented that position to the U.S. Congress. However, in the last ten years, NCAI has expanded its role to include other kinds of services to Indians such as technical assistance and informational dispersal.

Primary membership in NCAI is by tribe, but non-Indians may also become members.

The National Organization for Women (NOW) was born June 30, 1966 out of the fury and frustration of 28 women attending the Third National Conference of Commissions on the Status of Women in Washington, D.C. However, it was not officially incorporated until February 10, 1967. NOW, without one paid staff member and no budget, waged war on all aspects of sex discrimination. By 1971, 15,000 women and men had become members from Maine to Hawaii, and the fight for full equality was well on its way.

On August 24, 1967, at an emergency convocation in Washington, D.C., a prestigious group of 1,200 men and women joined together to mold a new political, social, economic, and moral climate to break the cycle of the ghetto -- this was the beginning of the Urban Coalition. Seven years later, this organization has 30-plus local Coalitions working to revitalize American cities and make them places where all residents will have a chance to have a good house, a decent job, a quality school for the kids, a safe street to walk down, quality health care, and reasonable community services.

The American Indian Movement (AIM) was founded on July 28, 1968, in Minneapolis, Minnesota to unify the more than 20 Indian organizations which were then felt to be doing little, if anything, to change life in the Indian ghetto. Presently, there are 79 chapters of AIM internationally, eight of which are in Canada. AIM has also developed ties with aboriginal organizations in Australia and with natives in Micronesia. Unlike other organizations dealing with Indian affairs, AIM begins with the people. The chapters direct and dictate priorities to the national officers who create and guide AIM in the long-range strategy to meet those priorities.

On September 30, 1972, a committee met in Las Vegas, Nevada to develop a constitution and by-laws for a national organization to assist Hispanic Americans interested in government service and to develop upward mobility for those already in civil service jobs. This organization is known as IMAGE. The concept of this organization was originated and developed in early 1972 in Denver, Colorado without an umbrella of united effort to create a regional or a national impact. Today, there are chapters in 43 locations throughout the country.
